

Buried Optical Cable Manufacturer

Article Overview

Leading manufacturers of buried optical cables include Corning, Prysmian, WOLON, Zion Communication, and TiniFiber, offering durable, armored, and direct-burial fiber solutions for underground installations.

Key Manufacturers and Their Offerings

Corning is a global leader in optical fiber innovation, providing direct-burial cables such as the ALTOS® series. These cables feature steel-armored, gel-free loose-tube designs with dual-layer jackets, engineered to resist moisture, soil pressure, and rodent damage, making them suitable for long-haul underground deployments . Prysmian manufactures loose-tube outdoor cables with options for gel-free or gel-filled construction, water-blocking yarns, and steel or composite armoring. Their cables are optimized for trenching and underground installation, offering high tensile strength and environmental durability for large-scale projects . WOLON (WOLONFIBER), based in China, provides cost-efficient direct-burial cables with aramid yarn reinforcement, steel or FRP armoring, and UV- and moisture-resistant jackets. WOLON emphasizes flexible order quantities and customizable fiber counts, making it suitable for long-distance routes where budget and adaptability are important . Zion Communication specializes in direct-buried optical fiber cables with multiple protective layers, including double sheath and PSP-enhanced armor. Their products are designed to withstand environmental stresses such as humidity, heat, and soil acidity, ideal for underground telecom and network infrastructure . TiniFiber offers Direct Burial Micro Armor Fiber, featuring a compact, flexible design with a stainless-steel coil, Kevlar reinforcement, and double-jacket loose-tube construction. These cables provide enhanced protection against water ingress, thermal extremes...
